

Digital Democracy Project for Candidates and Legislators

Digital Democracy Project provides a free civic engagement platform continuously compiling input from voters on numerous bills. For legislators, our platform serves as a way for them to hear from their voters, to inform how they decide to vote on these bills. On our continuously updating, national Tally maps, anyone can view real-time vote results down to the district level.

We then generate accountability scorecards for legislators evaluating them by how closely their floor votes matched how the voters had voted. Legislators can use their scorecard as a record for their re-election campaign, while, candidates can also use these legislator scorecards as a comparison to their own campaigns.

Endorsing Digital Democracy Project

As we are nonpartisan, it's an option for any candidate or legislator running for federal office or state-level in Florida, to endorse Digital Democracy Project (DDP)- meaning they want to use DDP as a way to hear from their voters to inform their voting, if elected.

Candidates can provide DDP to their voters to keep them informed, engaged, and empower them to have more of a say on legislation. Additionally, DDP helps candidates indicate to their voters, regardless of party, that they value their input and want to hear from them, while also enabling them to begin compiling this voter input to inform their campaign and their voting after they get elected.

For these candidates, we will help communicate their endorsement to our DDP community by:
- Posting their logo on our website linking to their campaign website
- Announcing the endorsement to our audience
- Providing a digital co-branded DDP lit design- of which candidates could print physical copies
- Conducting a video interview with the candidate giving them a platform to communicate to their voters
- Collaborating on community events (likely virtual) to engage their voters and share resources
- Providing training to volunteers on DDP and ways to further integrate DDP into campaigns
